

Big Night for Business

The Business Hall of Fame Honored Five Washingtonians and Raised Almost $500,000 to Help the Young People Who Hope to Be the Business Leaders of Tomorrow

Honoree
Esther Smith
was a high-tech guru.

Montgomery
County Police
Chief Charles
Moose received a special award.

Bill Marriott
followed his father
into the Hall of Fame.

Joe Allbritton
was one of the 2002
winners.

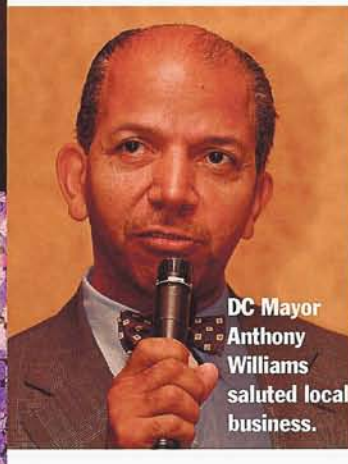

IT WAS A WHO'S WHO OF LOCAL BUSINESS. MORE THAN 1,100 people crowded into the ballroom of the Marriott Wardman Park Hotel to honor the 2002 inductees to the Washington Business Hall of Fame. Created by the Greater Washington Board of Trade, Junior Achievement of the National Capital Area, and The Washingtonian, the Hall of Fame recognizes those who have contributed significantly to building the area economy, creating jobs, and inspiring young entrepreneurs. Redskins owner Dan Snyder talked about what kept his eyes on the economic prize: His company's first small offices overlooked Marriott's corporate headquarters.

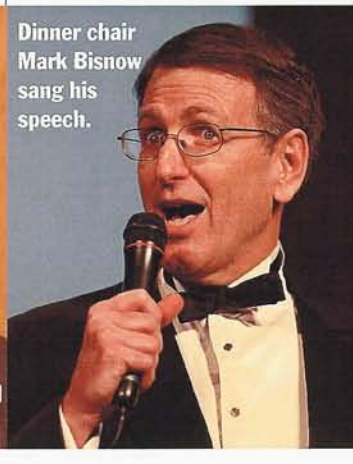

Jack Valenti
was honored
as an association
leader.

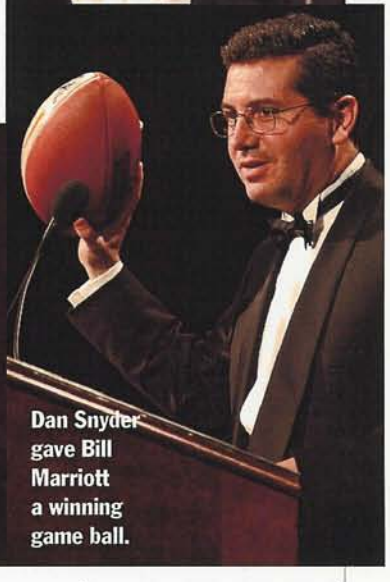

Honoree
James Clark
was escorted by a JA student.

DC Mayor
Anthony
Williams
saluted local business.

Dinner chair
Mark Bisnow
sang his speech.

Dan Snyder
gave Bill
Marriott
a winning
game ball.